Perspective Plan 2030

THE PLANNING PROCESS

Gramin Vikas Sewa Samiti (GVSS) vision for 2030 was shaped by some key processes. Extensive consultations with internal and external stakeholders, including community members, led us to adopt a Systems Thinking Approach. This shift marks a significant departure from our previous methods and is aimed at effecting substantial social change in rural India, particularly among women, tribal, and marginalized groups. Central to this approach is the enhancement of community collectives and collaborative efforts with ecosystem stakeholders at multiple levels and sectors. The objective is to tackle systemic obstacles and create scalable prototypes through grassroots initiatives and partnerships. GVSS underwent an organizational renewal process to facilitate strategic shifts towards working at scale by unlocking leadership potential. The operating structure is now reorganized at district, Development Cluster and State levels across seven states of the country. At the Central Functions (CFs) level, Monitoring, Evaluation and Learning (MEL) and technology functions are newly incorporated. Moreover, eight Centres of Excellence (CoEs) on Agriculture, Farmer Producer Organisations, Gender, Local Governance, Climate Action, Nutrition, Livestock and Forest, respectively have been established. Professionals having expertise on these thematic areas are spearheading the respective CoEs as leads to help sharpen our on-ground development work and strengthen collaborations with the external stakeholders. Lastly, detailed perspective plans have been developed for each state, CFs and CoEs based on the Theory of Change, overarching priorities and goals for the year 2030. These plans outline a road-map for action, extending to 2030 with annual breakdowns, to guide the organization's efforts synergistically and effectively across all work units. Through these processes, PRADAN aims to positively impact the lives of 50 million people in underserved rural regions of India.

GVSS's strategic Perspective Plan delineates a comprehensive approach to tackle rural poverty through robust livelihood programs and strategic partnerships. Having already reached 14 million individuals by March 2024, GVSS now aims to exponentially increase its impact, targeting the improvement of 50 million lives in marginalized and underserved regions of India by 2030. India's demographic dividend presents both opportunities and challenges, emphasizing the importance of equipping rural youth with skills for sustainable livelihoods. Ecologically, the restoration of land, water, and natural resources is imperative for enhancing livelihoods and preserving biodiversity, aligning closely with national priorities. Economically, fostering agricultural productivity and embracing renewable energy represent key pathways towards achieving inclusive growth and sustainability. PRADAN reflects on its achievements and future aspirations, aiming to deepen its impact while retaining core strengths. The organization's vision of a just and equitable society guides its mission to empower marginalized individuals, particularly rural women to lead lives of dignity. GVSS's goal for 2030 is to improve the lives of 50 million people by focusing on economic progress, gender equality, nutrition security, and ecological restoration. This ambitious goal will be achieved through community-led development, targeted interventions, strategic partnerships and data-driven approaches. GVSS's Theory of Change (ToC) outlines how large-scale social change can be achieved through collaborative systems change approaches. It emphasizes a community-centric approach to catalyze sustainable transformation, recognizing barriers faced by women, tribal, and marginalized groups. The ToC revolves around four community-level outcomes: strengthening livelihoods, promoting gender equality, restoring ecology, and ensuring nutrition security. Achieving these outcomes involves policy reforms, programmatic interventions, and developing vibrant community institutions. There are five overarching levers for change that focus on collaborative implementation and addressing systemic challenges. PRADAN plans to adopt a systems change approach, leveraging collaborations and innovative solutions to drive systemic transformation.

Collaboration with various stakeholders, including CSOs, corporates, government, and philanthropists, is crucial for achieving impactful results. Partnership models such as co-implementation with other CSOs and forming coalitions will drive large-scale systems change. Building the capacity of development professionals and frontline functionaries is essential. PRADAN has established CoEs to provide sector-specific knowledge and expertise, aiming to train about one million frontline functionaries for effective program implementation. Emphasizing data-driven decision-making, PRADAN aims to revamp its data collection process, establish a holistic development index, and embed data-based learning into all interventions. PRADAN plans to deepen and expand its operations in central India and expand into poverty clusters of Karnataka, Maharashtra, Tamil Nadu, and Uttar Pradesh. Operations will be consolidated through Development Clusters (DCs) and Direct-Action Teams (DATs), with a projected increase in DCs from 12 to 21 by 2030. Programmatic interventions will focus on six thematic areas: strengthening community institutions, livelihoods, gender equality, climate action, nutrition, health and WASH, and governance and inclusion. GVSS's structure emphasizes direct action at the block and district level, collaboration through DCs and State Units (SUs), and overall coordination through the Management Unit (MU). District teams will work closely with the district administration, DCs will serve as hubs for innovation and collaboration, and SUs will support DCs and coordinate multi-DC initiatives. The MU, comprising the Executive Director, representatives from state leadership and Central Function (CF) convenors, will provide overall leadership and integration. PRADAN anticipates mobilizing largescale program funds from the government flagship programs. Funding priorities include building community assets, capacity building, and supporting collaborative initiatives aligned with GVSS's strategic direction. GVSS's Perspective Plan emphasizes organizational agility, collaboration and strategic resource allocation to achieve its vision of sustainable impact at scale, driving transformative change in rural communities by 2030. This is a strategic guidance note for the next six to seven years which will trigger large-scale growth and sustainable transformation in the marginalized rural areas of India.
